DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections 35 U.S.C. 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

1. Claims 1, 6, 8-11, 16, 18-21, 26 and 28 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Thessin et al. (USPN 5452299).

Regarding claims 1, 11 and 21, Thessin teaches an "agent" including a display (121), a processor (102), a bus (101) as well as a user interface display of a single agent. See Fig 1B & 4. Thessin, however, does not specifically disclose a user interface with flexible layers such that the movement of one or more of the layers causes the display to change. Thessin does disclose a software organization (200) with a single agent including human interface (210), object manager (220) and multipoint link. Furthermore, Thessin teaches that the human interface layer detects change and updates the display according to the movement within the object manger. See col. 12, lines 24-34, Fig 6A (611), Fig 6B and Fig 2.

Regarding claims 6, 8, 16, 18, 26 and 28, see Thessin's Fig 6A (610, 612).

Regarding claims 9-10, 19-20, see Thessin's Fig 1B (100, 125, 121).

Therefore, it would have been obvious to one skilled in the art at the time the invention was made to utilize Thessin's software organization as configured in Fig 2. One would have been motivated in view of the suggestion in Thessin that the software organization including the human interface layer provides the desired user interface with flexible layers. The use of the “software organization” helps display the data structure in a desired fashion as taught by Thessin.

2. Claims 2-5, 7, 12-15, 17, 22-25, 27 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Thessin et al. in view of Campbell et al. (USPN 5920703).

Thessin has been described above. However, Thessin does not disclose a separation, bending and deflection of flexible layers. Campbell on the other hand teaches network protocol layers of a communication stack (100) from computer software including a data link control layer (104) and a path control layer (106). See Fig 3.

Therefore it would have been obvious to one having skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify Thessin’s communication apparatus to include Campbell’s computer software including layers as configured in Fig 3. One would have been motivated in view of the suggestion in Campbell that the software provides the desired bending deflection and separation of layers. The use of a Campbell’s software helps achieve effective communication stack in data communication system as taught by Campbell.
